The Curious Case of Manju

Manju, a final-year student in a BTech course, was excited about starting a corporate career. With his good grades and knowledge, even his professors knew he would get a job quickly.

As Manju started applying for jobs, he found the lack of any response scary. He applied to over 100 jobs without even getting a call.

He shared his plight with his close friend, who pointed out that instead of writing "working hardly" in his resume bio, he had written, "hardly working."

And that made all the difference. As soon as Manju corrected this silly mistake, he started getting calls for interviews and successfully got a job in the company he had wanted.

Not everyone has a friend like Manju who can help you find out the mistakes you can make in your communications.

The National Association of Colleges and Employers lists "Communication Skills" as the most sought-after soft skill by employers, even ranking higher than critical thinking and problem-solving.

– Source(NACE) 2023 Job Outlook

73% of talent professionals consider "communication skills" as critical for hiring decisions.
